LETTER FROM NEBRASKA.

[Correspondence Pittsburgh Gazette.]

PLATTSMOUTH, NEB., June 27th, 1872.

The present month has long been appellated "the month of roses," and here on the prairies of the great west, in this respect, nature appears in her robes of the most beautiful tints. Waving grass, intermingled with the "wild flowers of the plains," waving grain fields, and the green robed prairies, undulating and diversified here and there with numerous groves both natural and artificial, greet the eye in every direction. Indeed a drive out upon the prairies at this season of the year—waiving the question of hot weather, is decidedly a treat to one unaccustomed to life on the prairies; but to ourself it is but a repetition of what we have annually witnessed for the last nine years.

PRAIRIE GRASS.

The large quantities of rain which have fallen during the season, has induced a luxuriant growth of grass on the prairies, and the prospect now is very flattering for an abundance of hay. Farmers here depend almost entirely upon the prairie for hay; they are at no expense or labor to produce it, and in this respect they may sustain an advantage over the farmers of the Keystone. Yet we do not think this hay so nutritious as clover and timothy.

CLOVER AND TIMOTHY.

Efforts have been made repeatedly to raise clover and timothy on prairie soil, but have not proved a very decided success. The soil does not seem adhesive enough to retain the seed, or rather the soil seems too light for that purpose.

CROPS.

The prospect for a bountiful yield of spring wheat never seemed more flattering; previously, fears were entertained that the chintz bug would materially injure the wheat, but at the present writing we hear of no damage done as yet. The wheat is yet exposed to these insects, but another week or two will place it beyond their time.

The area sown in wheat the present season we believe to be smaller than during any previous year. Barley and Oats, present a flattering appearance; of the former a large area was planted and owing to the very limited number of home breweries, we opine that barley will be very cheap. Corn is backward; the spring was late, and the major part of the corn crop was planted the last of May. This makes a large portion look rather diminutive at the present time.

WILD FRUIT.

And of this we think we have the fairest prospect ever seen in Nebraska. The strawberry season has just past, and it has been one of the most beautiful that we ever saw. The wild strawberries grow in great abundance on the prairies of a favorable season. Wild plum bushes and wild grape vines which grow here in Nebraska in almost superabundance are literally pendant with fruit. This to a certain extent will supply the want of the Damson and Catawba, both of which our people are beginning to cultivate to a considerable extent. During the past few years our citizens have taken a deep interest in the culture of grapes, and many vineyards are already planted. The success thus far attending has been really encouraging.

PLATTSMOUTH.

This place, of which we have had occasion to speak in a previous letter, is still progressing as the country settles up. A large grain trade has been built up at this place, and a large amount is in store awaiting shipment. Three papers are published here, and the fourth—the daily Watchman, will be issued in a few weeks. Altogether we feel encouraged to know that as pioneers in the great work of settling up the western plains, the efforts made hitherto have been crowned with success the present year.

News Notes on an Old Question.

In the Atlantic Monthly for July, in his article on Thomas Jefferson, Mr. Parton alludes to the ridicule which Virginians formerly heaped upon New Englanders for their persecution of Quakers and so-called witches, and says that "Virginians * * * are not generally aware that at the time when Yankee Magistrates were hanging witches and whipping Quakers, Virginia Justices of the Peace were putting Quakers in the pillory for keeping their hats on in church, and appointing juries of matrons to fumble over the bodies of old women for 'witch marks.'"

South Carolinians, too, it will be remembered, were very zealous in ridiculing New England for the same reason; and here, again, Mr. Parton's remark that "it is the privilege of an American citizen to be profoundly ignorant of his country's history," is quite applicable. It is not generally known, but it is none the less true, that the old English witchcraft laws remained in force in the state of South Carolina until six months ago, when they were abolished upon the recommendation of the commissioners for the Codification of the Laws. In 1839, Dr. Cooper, President of the State University, and a very able and learned man, revised the statutes, and inserted the witchcraft laws, saying in a note, that he had no authority to omit them, as they were neither abolished or absolute. No action in regard to them was taken subsequently until last winter, when a carpet-bag Legislature repealed them.

Not only were these laws in force upon the statute book, but they were executed upon a poor victim nearly 100 years after the last witchcraft execution at Salem.

It would seem that old Massachusetts was not so very much civilized in the olden time than her superior Southern sisters.

Agassiz's Report.

It is a pleasure to hear from the great Agassiz himself once more in his report to the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, for the newspaper correspondents have shown a lack of that easy knowledge of scientific terms which "bejumbles the judgment" of the average mind, and which the illustrious chief is so familiar with. About a mile from the shore bluff in Patagonia, and 150 feet above the sea level, he found what surprised even him, a salt pool with shells identical with those living along the shore, in a perfect state of preservation and many of them alive, the most common of which were furns, myrtilus buccinum, fissurella, putella voluta, etc., apparently in the same numeric relation that they exist along the sea below. All this indicates a recent upheaval of the coast, though at what time only a more extensive survey can determine. A number of glaciers now existing were found, and extensive traces of glacial action and deposits. Passing Sandy Point, in Patagonia, the country has an Alpine appearance, though the mountains rise to no more than 7,000 feet at the highest, but their bases are washed by the ocean, and, being very steep, they seem much higher than they are, and the comparison to the Alps might be carried out in detail. After passing Cape Froward, the Professor became confident that the range of hills in sight along the Channel had been molded by an abrasion of ice, and now having seen the whole length of the Straits of Magellan, he is prepared to maintain that the whole southern extremity of the American Continent has been worked into its present shape by the same forces.

Hidden Manhood.

Harriet Martineau tells how, when she had grown to be quite a girl, a little one was born into her home; and as she would look and ponder, not knowing what would become of it, she got a great terror into her heart that the babe would never speak, or walk, or do anything that she could do, because, she said, how can it, seeing that it is so helpless now? But she found, when the right time came, that the feet found their footing and the tongue its speech, and then, everything came on its own right time; and then, instead of a babe, she had a noble and beautiful brother, who was able to take her part, and teach things to her, who had taught him. So the babe became an illustration, when it came to manhood, of a very common latent fear in the hearts, not of sisters so much as of fathers and mothers, that the life that has come to them, and is their life over again, will not scramble or grow, or wrestle into its own paces, as theirs, has done.

It doesn't always pay to follow Horace Greeley's advice. A farmer in the vicinity of Indianapolis, a few years ago, sold his farm for $4,000 and went West to grow up with the country. Last week he was in that city seeking employment at fifty dollars a month, while the ground that used to be his farm is now worth nearly a million dollars.

Trial of Stokes.

THE DEFENSE OPENED.

Labor Strikes Dying Out.

NEW YORK, July 3, 1872.

THE STOKES TRIAL.

The court room was greatly crowded at the Stokes trial. The first witness, Dr. Marsh, testified that he attended the post mortem examination on Fisk's body, describing the course taken by the bullet in the abdomen; judged the death of Fisk was caused by shock.

In Stoke's case, this afternoon, Mrs. Hooker half sister to Fisk, testified to the relationship. This closed the case for the prosecution.

Mr. McKeon made the opening speech for the defense. He traced the movements of Stokes, after the examination in Judge Bixby's Court, first to Rufus F. Andrews' office, to inquire if it was true that Fisk had got an indictment of blackmailing against him, mentioning as his reason for asking that he wanted to be in Providence, R. I., on the 9th to attend an arbitration in a trotting case. Andrew told him he heard nothing. Mr. Bixby, of the Grand Jury, whom he next visited, told him there was no truth in the rumor. Then he drove in a cab to his residence at the Hoffman House, and told a gentleman, who would be produced, that he had come for papers in the trotting case. He got them and drove down Broadway to Josie Mansfield's residence for other papers; but seeing the blinds closed, and knowing she was ill, did not go in, but ordered his man to drive to the Grand Central. He had not tracked Fisk the whole time, and gave the driver no directions as to the route, and the cab went by a different route from what Fisk took afterwards. On getting out of the cab an acquaintance walked across the street with him, and Stokes said he thought there was a lady who had saluted him from the ladies' parlor up stairs that knew him, and he would go and see her. He went in by the ladies' entrance; went to the ladies' parlor, and looking at the lady, saw he was mistaken. He was returning to his friend, and at the head of the stairs saw Fisk coming. His first impulse was to go down, and he went a step or two down, then paused, and at the same moment saw Fisk taking out his pistol, as if in the act of cocking it. Knowing the desperate character of the man he had to deal with, and knowing that Fisk had threatened his life, he pulled out a pistol that he carried in self defense the whole winter, and rapidly fired two shots; then walked back and descended the main staircase. Not a soul under heaven but the two saw what happened. On his way down he told one of the servants to go and look after a man who was shot.

In conclusion, the counsel dwelt on the admissions of witnesses for the prosecution as to rumors of Fisk having been armed. He regretted that the District Attorney did not bring forward the parties who took charge of Fisk's clothing, and assured the jury in addition that some of Stokes' relatives had insanity, and that Stokes' mind was upset since his incarceration by Fisk on a charge of embezzlement, so that his love for his father was turned to hate.

The prisoner, at this point, trembled and shaded his eyes. The court adjourned to Friday morning.

THE LABOR STRIKES.

The strikes, though fast falling off, still have a strong hold upon many of the men. A strong effort is being made by the Employers' Union to persuade the workingmen to return to the old system.

The committee of the Employers' Union have issued an address to the workmen, appealing to them to resume labor, which is being distributed to-day in German and English by thousands.

The Employers' Central Executive Committee is about to send to the manufacturers throughout the country a copy of the resolutions adopted at the meeting of employers on the 18th of June, pledging them to pay workmen hereafter by the hour, and to employ only those willing to work ten hours; also a set of blanks containing questions in regard to the system of labor in the establishments of the person who received the communication, and his opinions concerning the labor question, and the best practicable means of resisting and preventing strikes.

MUSICAL.

The Academy of Music will be given up on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of next week to Herr Strauss and Madame Arabella Goddard. Strauss will bring with him a large and well-selected orchestra from the performers of the jubilee. Madame Peschka Leutner will give a concert on invitation of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Major Powell and other eminent citizens of Brooklyn, at the Rink in that city, some evening between the 7th and 13th of July, for the benefit of the Brooklyn Orphan Asylum. Madame Leutner will give one concert in Philadelphia and one in Washington, but will not appear in New York.

CELEBRATING THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

The official programme for the celebration by the city of the Fourth of July comprises a jubilee, concerts of instrumental music and an exhibition of fireworks at the battery and the principal public parks in the evening. The display is expected to be very fine.

There were fourteen deaths from sunstroke between midnight and eight o'clock this morning, and one hundred and six deaths from heat in the past few days. Four times that number were prostrated.

It comprises twelve dispatches, besides the protocols of proceedings before the Board, which have already been made known to the public. The correspondence closes with a dispatch from Earl Granville, expressive of the appreciation of the offices of Lord Tenterden and Sir Roundel Palmer. Earl Granville says: I should not do justice to the feeling of Her Majesty's Government if I did not acknowledge the conciliatory spirit manifested by your American Colleagues. The good feeling shown on both sides has facilitated the deliberations of the arbitrators.

Earl Granville, in conclusion, acknowledges the thoughtfulness and wisdom evinced by the arbitrators in adopting the conclusions to which they have spontaneously arrived.

FRANCE.

TAX ON RAW MATERIALS.

PARIS, July 3.—The debate on the bill imposing a tax on raw materials is now in progress in the National Assemby at Versailles. The members of the Right are resolute in their determination to reject the measure, and hope for a majority against it with the aid of the representatives of the free trade districts in the South of France.

PRESIDENT THIERS.

Among the questions discussed is the contingency of the resignation of Thiers and the appointment of a triumvirate, to be composed of Marshal McMahon, General L'Admirault and Duc De Broglie in his place, which is again mooted. The party of the left are now unanimous in their support of Thiers They have had an interview with the President and on receiving a promise of their assistance, he made a brief speech, in which he distinctly stated he would not in any event resign. Thiers also announced that he was fully aware of the intrigues of the Right, and remarked that the Left may implicitly rely on him to defend with firmness and all his power the interests of the Republic.

WEST INDIES.

THE FANNIE EXPEDITION.

HAVANA, June 2.—The two schooners seen off Cayo Romano, which were supposed to be receiving the cargo from the steamer Fannie, were wrecking an English bark. It is now positively known that the Fannie landed nothing previous to landing her cargo at Herradhra. According to the declaration of prisoners, the landing place of the Fannie was the worst on that part of the island between Sagua de Lamo and Puerto de Ceballas. The troops killed the guide of the expedition, and the situation was then unpleasant. The whole vicinity of the scene is a wilderness. The united forces of Modesto Diaz and Maqui Gomez attacked the Spanish convoy, killing and wounding nearly all. The survivors escaped into the woods. This engagement was the most successful for the Cubans of any during the revolution, the Spanish losing fifty in killed and wounded. The convoy had charge of a party of sick soldiers, who embarrassed the movements of the defense. The Cubans numbered one thousand; the Spaniards two hundred.

MODEST DEMANDS OF CHIEFS.

WASHINGTON, July 3, 1872.

WHAT THE INDIANS WANT.

When the Apache delegation visited the President to-day, they were accompanied by Secretary Delano, Commissioner of Indian Affairs Walker, and Gen. Howard. The Indians expressed a desire to live at peace with the whites, and said they wanted horses, shops, farms, and to be educated at school. Santa, one of the chiefs, asked for a suit of clothes like the President's, and a cane, a pistol, a sword, and a horse to ride, to show his consequence at home. The President told them he was anxious to promote their comfort, but to that end it was necessary for them to keep the peace, and he would do everything in his power to protect them from bad white men. He thought they would have a better home in the Indian Territory, where attention could be paid to their improvement, and they would be assisted in farming, and school houses would be built for them, and mechanics would teach them how to work, and other benefits rendered them. Miguel said at one time he was on bad terms with the whites, not knowing whether they were Americans or Mexicans, but as soon as he learned they were Americans he buried all his badness. He was now their friend. Several other Indians addressed the President, declaring their determination hereafter not only to live at peace among themselves, but toward the whites.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably continue slowly to fall, and especially in New York and New England, and south-west winds continue from Ohio to New England; southerly winds without material increase of temperature, but with a close, moist atmosphere, and light local storms be experienced throughout the Atlantic States on Thursday.

INDIAN OUTRAGES IN TEXAS.

Gen. Sheridan, in dispatches to the War Department relative to Indian depredations in certain portions of Texas, recommends decisive action against the authors, striking at the root of the evil, instead of attempting to guard the whole Texan border.

WISCONSIN.

Reunion of the Army of the Tennessee.

MADISON, July 3.—The sixth annual reunion of the Army of the Tennessee began here this morning The attendance is not as large as was anticipated, but many prominent officers are present, among others General Belknap, Secretary of War, Lieut. Gen. Sheridan, Gen. Mayers, of Ohio, Gen. McCook, and others. The society met in the Senate Chamber at ten A. M., and was called to order by General Slack, of Indiana, First Vice President, in the absence of the President, General W. T. Sherman.

The decorations of the hall are very superb. In front of the gallery, over the Speaker's desk, was emblazoned on blue ground half a circle, from which hangs half a dozen flags, the badge of the Army of the Tennessee, a golden eagle, pennant to a pen, with a shield on his breast, with a cartridge box, and legion of forty wounds, and a silver eagle in his talons. The word "Vicksburg" in large letters is beneath. Over the Speaker's desk are the names of Grant and Sherman, and beneath a portrait of the absent President, Sherman. Flowers and evergreens wreathe the Speaker's and Clerk's desks, which are adorned with handsome boquets. On the platform immediately in front, is set a chair for the first President, Gen. John A. Rawlins, draped with crape, and decorated with two white leaves on the top; a wreath of evergreens and white flowers, and a chair for Gen. W. T. Sherman, the absent President, beautifully trimmed with arbor vitae, cedar and lovely flowers. On one corner of the platform is a trophy with a cavalry guidon and various implements of war, old guns, swords, knapsacks, drums, a mammoth torpedo, a piece of cannon, shot and shell, and other relics of war. On the other corner is a peaceful trophy, with the implements of husbandry, plows, spades and hoes, sythes, forks, &c., with sheaves of wheat, barley, rye, grass, &c. At each pillar of the gallery is a United States and State flag, and many of the old banners borne by Wisconsin soldiers of the Army of Tennessee in many a bloody strife. Directly in front of the Speaker's desk, in the gallery opposite, are pictures of Washington and Lincoln. On one side is a picture of General Grant; on the other a picture of Grant and his Generals. On either side of the portraits of Washington and Lincoln are the names of dead Generals, draped in black—Rawlins, McPherson Mower, Ransom, Crocker, Fairchilds—ranged around in front of the gallery, which, by the way was fringed all around with two rows of arbor vitæ, on which are the names of living Generals—Logan, Hurlbert, Osterhouse, Belknap, Smith, Hazen, Pope, Fuller, Wolcott, Colt, and on one side McClellan, Wilson, Gresham, Dodge, Force, Howard, and Legett. At the base of each are the names of battles in which the army participated—Belmont, Fort Henry, Fort Donaldson, Shiloh, Iuka, Corinth, Island No. 10, Chickasaw, Bayou, Arkansas Post, Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson, Champion Hills, Big Black, Vicksburg, Lookout Mountain, Missouri Ridge, Ressacca, Dalton, New Home Church, Dallas, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, Nickageick Creek, Atlanta, Jonesborough, Lovejoy station, Altoona Pass, Malon, Fort Fisher, Savannah, Pocatalego, Salkahatchie, Orangeburg, Columbia, Cheran, Bentonville, Goldsborough, Raleega, and Grand Gulf.

From the dome of the chamber a cord is hung with arbor vitæ stretched to the top of each pillar of the gallery, and a circle formed around the chandelier, which was gaily festooned and decorated with evergreens, knots of ribbons, flowers, flags, &c.

Gen. Slack, on taking the chair, congratulated the society on the favorable auspices under which they met.

Gen. Sam. Fellows, of Madison, invoked the Divine blessing.

Several committees were appointed as to the time and place for holding the next reunion.

Col. Dayton, Recording Secretary, read a letter from Gen. Sherman, dated Constantinople, regretting his inability to be present, as follows: I hope you will have a splendid gathering at the most beautiful spot on the four lakes in Wisconsin. I have seen Como and Gaurda, the two famous Italian lakes, but neither, in my opinion, surpass in natural beauty of water and shore that of the upper lake at Madison. Give my best love to all my old comrades at Madison. Tell them I will try and make up at our next annual meeting for my absence at this meeting.

Long Branch, June 17, 1872.—To my dear General:—Your favor of the 10th inst., urging me to attend the meeting of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee on the 3d and 4th of July next, is received. It has been my determination to attend that meeting, and I feel very much disappointed at not being able to do so; but my son, who is now at Harvard, will return on the 20th of June, and he has taken passage on the steamer leaving New York on the 6th of July, to be absent a year. I do not see that I can very well leave him at the only time I can possibly have him with me. However, I will see, and if I can possibly attend the meeting of the society, I will do so. Should I not be present, you may assure the society that the disappointment is much greater to me than it possibly can be to them. It is largely composed of men whose first military service was with me and men who have earned lasting renown for services rendered their country in times of trial, sometimes of almost despair. Should I not be present, express my great regret thereat, and my hope that you and they will have a happy reunion, and that there will be many more of them, when I may be fortunate enough to be present.

Very truly yours,

To Gen. Force. U. S. GRANT.

IOWA.

Fearful Railway Accident.

CEDAR RAPIDS, July 3.—A fearful accident occurred on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, yesterday afternoon, one mile east of Belle Plain. A freight train ran into a construction train and telescoped the caboose of the latter train, killing one man almost instantly, and mortally wounding six others. Four of the wounded have since died, and the other two cannot live.

Struck by Ligtning.

LOUISVILLE, KY., July 3.—Irvine Bell, foreman, and John Lee, a laborer, in the gravel pits near the head of Shelby street, were struck by lightning this afternoon. Bell was instantly killed. Lee died in five minutes. Their clothing and shoes were torn to pieces, but there was no mark on their persons, except on Bell's face, neck and breast, which were much discolored, almost black.

BOSTON.

The Musical Jubilee.

BOSTON, July 3.—The concert this afternoon was listened to by a very large audience. The chorus was not there at all, if the sound from the seats was to be depended on, but the military bands made up for all deficiencies, and Strauss was more than himself in conducting "Wine, women and song," and an encore, the polka, "Kratuse Fidal." Peschka Leutner sang the "Venzana Waltz" with striking effect, and was encored to repetition of brilliant passages.

Mr. Kosleck, of the Berlin Quartette, gave a fine exemplification of his accomplishment on the cornet, and the English band performed Vivanis' processional march, "The Silver Trumpets," as played at St. Peter's at Rome, with a splendid effect on the audience.

The Garde Republicaine Band will celebrate the fourth of July by a dance at Dedham, at the invitation of Louce Leche, a French resident. They will give six concerts in New York, three in Philadelphia, and will possibly visit Chicago before returning to Europe.

Horace Greeley was escorted to the press room by Alderman Jenks previous to the concert, and introduced to the ladies and gentlemen, representatives of the press. After a few minutes' pleasant conversation, in answer to a general call, he spoke as follows:

It has fallen to my lot recently, as you are doubtless aware, to be placed before the public in a somewhat conspicuous attitude, that is to say, we who work for the press, and live by the press, work and live in the public sight and under public criticism to a greater degree than most people, and yet I think to-day my position is a little more exposed to cavil and disappointment than that of most of you. It has been said of me, and I take it as a great testimonial and compliment, that while in the business that I have pursued throughout my life, I have shown myself very fairly competent, very fairly diligent and successful. Yet, if I were or should be invited to another line of life into different, and, if you please, higher responsibilities, I should be found unequal to them. Well, ladies and gentlemen, I cannot well expect to have anything better said of me by my friends, much less by my adversaries, than to say that I have done well that which I have had to do. [Applause.] It would seem a tolerably safe doctrine that one who has been doing well all his life that which he he has tried to do, may possibly, may reasonably be expected to do well something else if he were to undertake it. Some of my critics observe that though for myself personally I am a tolerably honest and respectable person, yet my associates are not very desirable—an unworthy set. [Laughter and applause]. I am very sorry for that, because my associates through life have been mainly the gentleman and ladies I see about me (applause), whose acquaintance I made when engaged in the matter of preparing information for the public press, and if any associations were disagreeable, I can hardly hope to find better in my future life than those I have had. I trust this was not meant to say that such gentlemen and ladies as I see before me have not on the whole performed their work and discharged their responsibilities with reasonable fidelity; with human imperfections, with human faults doubtless, but still with fair, reasonable human fidelity. At all events, ladies and gentleman, with such as you my fortune has been associated through life. With such as you it will be associated to the end, and if the world shall say of me in the end, "He was a good printer, a respectable publisher, and an honest editor," all my ambition will be satisfied. Ladies and gentlemen, I will tax your attention no longer.

At the conclusion of his speech, Greeley was conducted to the City Reception Room, where a large number sought an introduction.

CLEVELAND.

A Fiendish Outrage.

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—Two butchers of Royalton, a small village near Cleveland, having a grudge against a farmer named Conrad Schweitzer, living in Parma township, seven miles from this city, went to Schweitzer's house, last Saturday where they found no one at home except a child about nine years old, named Betty Walter, a grand-daughter of Schweitzer. Seizing the child, they poured coal oil on her clothes and set them on fire. The cries of the child brought the grand mother to the house, but the child was so badly burned that she died in a few hours. Before her death, however, she told who the fiends were who committed the terrible act. One man was arrested for the crime, but the evidence not being sufficient, he was discharged.

HUDSON.

Five Persons Drowned.

HUDSON, N. Y., July 3.—Four boys, aged from ten to twelve, named respectively Kennedy, Martin, Leonard and Birmingham, while bathing in the Hudson river at this city this afternoon, got beyond their depth, and were drowned before assistance could reach them. In searching for their bodies a man names James Collins was also drowned. All the bodies except Collins' have been recovered.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The Moral and Political Significance of our National Holiday.

We have been kindly permitted by Rev. John Scarborough, Rector of Trinity Church, to publish the following extract from a sermon preached by him on Sunday evening last. The selection we make is of that portion of the sermon relating more especially to our great national holiday, which we think the preacher treated with marked ability, and as the same is appropriate to this day, we gladly give it to our readers:

The text—Joshua IV, 21—22.—"When your children shall ask their fathers in time to come, saying: What mean these stones? Then ye shall let your children know, saying: Israel came over this Jordan on dry land."

The sermon proceeded to show how the custom of perpetuating great events by some visible sign, had prevailed all through history from the earliest day down to the present.

God had Himself set apart the seventh day as a perpetual witness of His finished work. Noah set up an altar for the double purpose of worshipping before it and marking the spot where the dry land first appeared. The bow in the Heavens was a sign of God's own choosing.

The most imposing and solemn memorial service of the Jewish ritual was the Passover, which handed down from generation to generation a knowledge of God's marvellous intervention on their behalf, when the first born of Egypt died. In the same way the varied services, of the Christian year are but a series of commemorations, the birth, the death, the resurrection of Christ. Christmas, Easter, Ascension Day and Whitsunday are each a memorial of some precious truth in the Christian system. And the fact that certain truths are linked to these days, has done much to keep a knowledge of the doctrines fresh and clear in the mind. The State adopts the same methods of perpetuating great names and great events. Every nation has her catalogue of sacred holidays that grow out of the events of history.

It was in accordance with this general principle that Joshua set up an altar of twelve stones taken out of the bed of the river to perpetuate the mercy which had enabled the host to cross it dry-shod. This was to be the simple memorial of a great event. And so long as the people knew its meaning and recognized it, the same purpose was served as if it had been a more costly monument. And by the same sort of argument it will appear that all the outward ordinances established by Christ in His church were meant to perpetuate some great truth or fact. They are witnesses of His love and favor. Their simplicity is no argument against them. The sacraments, for instance, make use of common elements; but like the smooth stones set up by Joshua, when these elements are separated for a sacred use, they represent a new idea. The water of the font speaks of our union with Christ and the cleansing away of sin, and thus becomes the type of a new and holy life. The bread and wine of the Lord's supper become memorials of his death and sacrifice, and we need these outward symbols to keep the truth ever fresh in mind. The church and the State therefore are both agreed in their modes of handing down truths to posterity. They do not trust the printed page alone, but appoint a day—set up a monument, or institute some visible action—that will speak to the eye as well as the heart. The national flag is but a sentiment in bunting, yet its meaning is comprehended. The cross may be only a piece of common wood, but it reminds us of him who hung upon it.

We have only indicated very briefly the argument of the sermon, to show how the following extract relating to our national holiday grew out of it.

"It is fitting and proper therefore, according to both divine and human precedent, that great truths and great occasions, or the names and deeds of great men should be handed down to posterity by some special mark, some visible sign or token. The church of early days recognized this principle by canonizing her great names, and pointing to them with infinite pride, like the mother who, gazing fondly on her noble sons, said "These are my jewels." Every nation on the face of the earth that has a history at all, has her proud memorials treasured up in like manner. We are hardly old enough yet as a nation to have any great wealth in relics of this sort; but for the past few years we have been making history so rapidly that I am sure a new era has dawned on us in this respect.

Many names of persons and places that were formerly obscure are now familiar to old and young, and will never be allowed to pass into oblivion again. The great commanders by land and sea have won for themselves imperishable fame, and a place for all time in the memory of the nation, while the multitude of nameless heroes who by their bravery and spirit enabled them to wreath their brows with laurels, are not likely to be forgotten.

And, as time sifts out the chaff from the wheat of history, such places as Antietam, Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Appomatox and the Wilderness, will stand more clearly and boldly defined than they are now. These were turning points in our existence. Here our fate as a nation was once and again decided, and posterity will see to it if we do not, that they be duly honored. The tens of thousands of unmarked and unknown graves of brave men, friend and foe, will forever be the eloquent pleaders of these memorable fields, shrining them in the popular heart. Surely we will see fit that some worthy record of those noble men and noble deeds is made, so that generations after ours may point to them with pride.

We are standing to-night almost upon the eve of our greatest—and I may truly say hitherto almost our only—national holiday. And its return seems to call such thoughts up in the mind. I offer no apology for uttering them, for they are in harmony with the occasion. I would that the day which has so long by common consent been regarded as the birthday of the nation, might be duly honored throughout the land and made a day of hearty joy and thanksgiving for the mercies we thereon commemorate. Heretofore it has been honored in our history by old and young as standing foremost among the secular days of all the year. And as I have endeavored to show, this is only as it should be, according to the precedents of other nations. Of late, however, I fear the old enthusiasm which hailed this day is flagging or dying out, and I cannot regard this as a favorable sign of the times; for who can tell in how many hearts it kept the fires of patriotism burning till the needful time came and its lessons of patriotism buckled on the sword anew, and the solemn law went up to Heaven, that the memories of this National anniversary should never be defaced nor bear the foul stain of unfaithfulness.

Who can tell how much the precious memories of such a day have had to do in keeping discordant elements together by appealing to their common heritage and common pride? However, the members of one family may differ among themselves, all factions will resent any blot that may be cast on the fair fame of a common ancestry. Hence with the blessings of peace among ourselves may we not expect to find the memories of this day even more cherished than they were before. It is a living memorial like the Passover, or the altar of smooth stones which Joshua built to proclaim from father to son an important national event. It has already told the glorious history of freedom to three whole generations. And to the glory of the past there is new lustre added. It is no longer merely the anniversary of the nation's birth, but of its new birth. It has passed through, as it were, its chrysalis state, and set out upon a new and beautified existence.

The clouds that gathered over it in the past are every one dissipated, and now it stands out clearer and brighter than it ever did before. May it prove to be a new and holy band to unite and retain the national life as one, kindling anew, as it were, that ancient love of country which is the surest pledge of future peace and prosperity. And may all, from north to south, and east to west, hail its rising sun with renewed joy, and pray that the principles of eternal truth and right which it commemorates may take a deeper root in the hearts of the people everywhere.

The day has been, as it were, consecrated anew and re-baptized in blood, so that its return henceforth shall revive more precious memories even than those which belong to the early days of our history. And when your children shall ask you in time to come, saying, "What means this day?" then shall ye let your children know, saying, "Israel came over to this Jordan on dry land; this day the nation first, as it were, set its hand and seal to those inalienable principles of freedom and right that are in our day fully realized in all their length and breadth, and height and depth!"

It is the property of no one party or section of the country, but the common heritage of all—now more than ever. And as the tomb of Washington was respected by contending armies—both claiming the precious dust as their own—both guarding the sacred spot from assault and sacrilege, so I trust will all the people welcome this anniversary as their own, and boast themselves in its undimmed glories. But a decade of years since and the surging floods of a Jordan seemed to roll between us and our land of promise. And though its waves were crested with blood, God's voice has stayed its flow and we have passed over safely. Nay, not only so—for that does not tell all His mercy and goodness to us. We are not only over safely, but we crossed on dry land; our confidence and fidelity never wavered.

Prosperity has followed us on the way, and to-day there is not a nation the sun shines upon that is more highly favored than ours. Ought we not to rejoice with unfeigned hearts? See our teeming fields well nigh ripe unto the harvest. See our vast and hitherto unheard of sources of national wealth opening up one after another. See the enterprise and skill that are ever found ready to develope these. See the wealth and the prosperity that are increasing at unprecedented rates. And all this after the exhausting wastes and expenditures of war are deducted! Surely we may well boast that our feet are planted firmly on dry land—on a sure and stable foundation, which no violence can ever shake. I do not speculate as to what the future will be. Yet, as I try to peer behind the dark curtain which shuts it out from mortal gaze, it seems to rise before my mind as something surpassingly, and beyond comparison, grand.

Unlooked-for storms may be lurking in the heavens, and at a moment when least expected they may break upon us in all their fury till the old ship of State shall reel to and fro again under the heavy stroke. But so far as human sagacity can foresee—if we are true to ourselves and true to posterity in dealing with the fair inheritance committed to our hands and keeping—our destiny will be a peerless one, unmatched in all the history of the world

Let us neither undervalue nor squander our heritage but religiously hand it down to others unimpaired, through all time, as one of God's best gifts to us and them. The soundness and practicability of our principles and form of government have been sorely tested in the century of our history that is nearly completed. But let us not give ourselves up to inordinate boasting. The past may suffice for that. And now as the nations of the earth are looking to us as a model of popular government, combining law with liberty—let us not disappoint the hopes or the longings of the oppressed, and by our unfaithfulness put the dial plate of human progress backward. Rather let us set out upon a new lease of life and upon the renewed opportunities which God has vouchsafed us, with the determination of never again forgetting the fact that we are strong only as we put our trust in him, and only where the Spirit of the Lord is, can there be true liberty. Let thanksgivings to God then go up from every heart and tongue on our coming anniversary, as the best and most acceptable service we can render the government and the country. And as we survey the past and see what God hath wrought for us, let us determine that so far as our lives and our prayers can secure it, the future shall be more glorious than the past—much very much will depend upon the character of those who are to shape and rule the destinies of this country hereafter. If wise and God-fearing counsel be taken—all is well—if on the contrary blind partisanship shall carry the day—the frame-work of the nation shall fall to pieces of its own weight and Ichabod shall be written on its name. Let intelligent patriotism possess the hearts of the people. Let the same indomitable spirit of zeal animate them in the future as in the past—and then the child of the next generation will learn to bless the names and the memories of those who suffered and labored and prayed so successfully for the preservation and welfare of the nation. Let us resolve then that with the glorious memories of this season fresh in our minds—and its lessons graven on our hearts—we shall aid in perpetuating them and that this memorial of the nation shall be everlasting. I wish our national holidays were more numerous than they are, and therefore I could not only cling to this one—but I would multiply them ten or twenty-fold—for the sake of the people who toil without any intermission from year's end to year's end.

But let us always, and before all things, remember that without the Divine presence and the Divine blessing the day will become an empty name, and our boasted freedom will degenerate into base licentiousness, while those that come after us will sadly rue the day that put the destinies of the nation into the keeping of faithless hearts and weak hands!

New York Fashions.

WHITE DRESSES

are seen in great varieties at the principal furnishing houses. The polonaise, and the basque with overskirt, are displayed for the street—French blouse for morning, and various other styles for evening. A polonaise made of Victoria lawn, to be worn over a white or over a black or a brown silk skirt, shows a plain tight-fitting waist and half flowing sleeves, which are trimmed with Hamburg insertion and a wide edge of the embroidery. The polonaise, which is open up the front, and which is edged with the same kind of work, is looped at the back with bows, formed of the material, which are also edged with embroidery.

COLORED ORGANDIES.

Dresses made of plain, striped and figured organdies are also seen at the different furnishing houses. Many of these are simply made, and offered at prices which vary from ten to fifteen dollars. They are generally finished with one wide or with three narrow ruffles upon the first skirt, and one ruffle upon the overskirt and basque. A simple but stylish dress of plain buff is trimmed with the border of the material, which represents wide black guipure lace and insertion, with knots of ribbon of a darker shade.

SILK AND GRENADINE EVENING DRESSES.

At a few informal openings some very rich silk and grenadine costumes for full dress and evening have been shown. Among them was a silk of the much admired sage green tint. The skirt had one wide flounce which was cut in deep points upon the bottom, and headed by a platted fan-like trimming of the material. The polonaise was grenadine of the same exquisite shape, with very small figures, also of the same shade, which were wrought in the open sewing silk stitch. This stylish garment, which was very full and bouffant; was looped in various places with broad blue ribbon, which showed a slight tinge of green.

TRAVELING DRESSES.

Expensive suits for traveling are made of camel's hair cloth, of lighter quality than the material which was imported during the winter. It is made into polonaises to be worn over black or colored skirts of the same shade. French cashmere polonaise, to be worn over silk skirts, are also among the expensive garments. These, like the camel's hair cloth, are trimmed with fringes of the same shade, or with worsted guipure. The skirt has one wide plaited flounce, or it displays the popular kilt plaiting. The colors show only the quiet tints.

What Protection Will Do.

The advantage of employing the industry of a nation advantageously is well shown by a few figures from the English statistics of 1860. England imported in that year, of raw products used in the manufacture of cotton, silks and woolens, to the value of £47,500,000. By adding to those products manufacturing industry, their export value reached £75,000,000. There was consumed in England only the value of £20,000,000, leaving her the difference in exchange of £7,500,000. These three branches of manufactures, founded mostly upon foreign raw materials, furnished employment to 700,000 laborers, whose wages supported 3,000,000 of her population, and enabled her capitalists to divide £15,000,000 profit upon their investment. It is no wonder that the British agents in this country are very active in bringing about such measures as will be likely to secure our markets to themselves. Of course they never misrepresent anything. Persons anxious to sell their wages never do!

NASBY calls Greeley "The Bushwhacker of Chappaqua."

THIS is the way the Post has approached the next Democratic candidate for the Presidency. It called him in January—The old idiot Greeley.
February—The eccentric Greeley.
March—Old Horace Greeley.
April—Horace Greeley.
May—Mr. Horace Greeley.
June—Honest Uncle Greeley.

And in July, we predict, it will be shrieking "Hurrah for the pure, the bright, the beautiful free-t—, tar—f, Dem—, Lib—, hurrah for Greeley anyhow." Now mind if it does'nt.

THE New York strikes have had a serious effect in arresting the building and general labor operations in that city. There has been a falling off in the value of buildings projected for the month of June, compared with the same period last year, amounting to $2,337,000. The loss is greater in first-class dwellings, large stores and buildings which not only improve the city, but furnish a large amount of work for workingmen. Only immediately pressing work is done under such a state of suspense as that which has hung over the various industries for the past few months. The figures give an idea of the amount of money lost by the workingmen in this single trade on account of the strikes. Instead of $5,617,000 being spent in building operations as in June, 1871, the amount for last month fell off to $3,290,000.

IT looks very much as if Barnum of Joyce Heth and woolly horse fame had undertaken the management of Horace Greeley for the summer season. The tricks of the showman are everywhere visible. Thus we read by special telegram to the Greeley papers that "Mr. Greeley held his weekly wood-chopping matinee at Chappaqua, as usual, Saturday, swinging his axe lustily for three hours." And then follows details of the guests, the dinner in the open air, with a great deal about "Miss Ida" and "Miss Gabrielle." Among the guests on this eventful Saturday was George N. Sanders, who was a partner with Greeley in the Niagara Falls peace negotiations, representing the Jeff. Davis crowd. If they are beginning to gather about the bland and child-like Horace now, how would it be at Washington on inauguration day, if he should be successful?

SOME of the Democrats, say five out of every ten, find Greeley a very bitter pill to swallow. He is the quinine of politics to them. A representative man of this numerous class presents his objections in the Detroit Free Press as follows:

1. Upon the occasion of a slight difference of opinion between my party and H. G. he said I was a d—d liar.
2. He said I was a horse thief.
3. He said I was a rascal and perjured villain.
4. He said I was a slum.
5. He said I was a poisonous reptile.
6. He said I was a traitor.
7. He said my "affinities" were all bad (not female.)
8. He said it would be the ruin of the country if my party ever got any power in it.

The Free Press prints a document signed by sixty-one Democrats of Wayne county, saying that "under no circumstances whatever will we vote for Mr. Greeley." The Democrat who sends this document to the Free Press says that hundreds of signatures might have been obtained in the county, adding: "In the meantime we have diligently inquired after Republicans who have forsaken Grant and will vote for Greeley, and find but one." At Freeport, Ill., a pledge has just been published with the names of fifty-two Democrats attached, making a similar declaration, and winding up with this admonition: "If others are willing to sell out their principles, we declare that we are not, and if sold out at Baltimore, those who sell us or our votes to the support of the Greeley party cannot deliver our votes." This represents a widely prevalent feeling. To use a favorite Greeleyism, when every thing didn't pass off to suit the old man, this summer and fall promises to be a splendid season for bolting.

THE Philadelphia Press is still savagely and foolishly attacking Mr. Cameron, striking out to the right and left, and uttering frantic shrieks without regard to either truth, decency or sense. It has been made public that in Col. Forney's absence in Texas, the high-toned friend of the Commercial of this city, the charming ideal of modesty—McClure, Aleck, the darling, bright eyed Aleck—is editing the Press, and its unusual warmth of expression, when mentioning the name of Cameron, is accounted for. It attacks our State candidates over the shoulders of Cameron, and although it has been assured over and over again, that neither Hartranft nor Allen was the first, second or third choice or any choice at all of Senator Cameron, yet it frets and fumes and lashes and yelps at them all the same, because it would wish to believe itself, and make others believe that the facts were otherwise. The Press, unlike the imbecile and impotent opposition of such puerile sheets as our little Virgin alley whiffet, places no reliance on the mixture of truth and falsehood, that composes the stock in trade of the opposition to our State ticket, well aware that it would be without a case were it to do so, but goes for the grander game and attacks it by assailing the fair name of our distinguished Senator. Nothing is too mean, low, and contemptible for it to stoop to, and for the sake of Mr. Forney's reputation, we give public notice that he is three thousand miles away from Philadelphia, and is therefore not responsible for the vile stuff with which the columns of the Press are daily polluted. On his return and the displacement of Aleck McClure, the thing will cease, and if opposition to Hartranft and Allen is to continue, it will be done fairly and squarely, based on such facts, and on such merits of the case as can be arrived at. Meanwhile, let the public know that a miserable debauchee is not to be confounded with a high-toned editor, even though he should temporarily fill the latter's shoes. If she Press wishes to attack Messrs. Hartranft and Allen, why does it not do so in a manly way, and stop assailing them on account of the grudge it bears to others? Then its arguments, if it shall use any, can be met and refuted, or they will stand unrefuted and have the intended weight.

THE FOURTH OF JULY.

The current number of Lippincott's Magazine has an interesting paper by Edward A. Pollard, of Virginia, on "the history of the Fourth of July," in which the facts of the immortal "Declaration" are recited and discussed with clearness and ability. Although more orations and essays have been uttered on the day and the events that have sprung from it, than on any other incident in political history, it is a fact that our people know very little of what was really done and what not done on that day. This in regard to details of events that preceded the Declaration by the Continental Congress and the colonies.

Many claims have been put forth for the real forerunner of the Declaration. The most famous is a formal declaration made by a committee of Mecklenberg county, North Carolina, as early as the 20th of May, 1775. Although Mr. Jefferson professed never to have seen this document, yet there is an identity of language and thought between it and his own composition, that Mr. Pollard says, with evident sarcasm, offers "an instance of honest literary coincidence wholly unparalleled." The Mecklenberg declaration was first brought to light in 1819 by a North Carolina newspaper, and its genuineness has been disputed. So far as legislation could make her an independent power, Virginia declared her own independence on the 29th of June, 1776, and laid the foundation of a permanent republican government by adopting what has been designated by Hon. Wm. C. Rives, the historian of the State, as "the first written constitution for a free sovereign, and independent State which the history of the world had yet called forth." Although this was but a few days before the formal Declaration by Cogress, yet it must be remembered they were not the days of railroad and telegraphic communication. Before the action of Virginia the colonies of South Carolina and New Hampshire had adopted temporary governments, "during the continuance of the dispute with the mother country," and in view of an ultimate "reconciliation" which they invoked. But the government established by Virginia was a permanent and independent one without conditions.

Coming to the action of the Continental Congress three dates may with reason compete for the designation of the natal day of American Independence. On the 7th of June, 1776, in obedience to instructions of the Virginia Convention, Richard Henry Lee, the oldest member of the Virginia delegation, presented a resolution declaring that "these United Colonies are, and of right out to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown; and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be dissolved." The resolution was slightly debated for two or three days, but the discussion was intermitted, and on the 11th of June, the committee of five, consisting of Jefferson, Adams, Franklin, Sherman and Livingston, were instructed to "prepare a declaration to the effect of the said resolution." This document was drafted by Mr. Jefferson, and presented under the title of "A Declaration by the Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled." On the 2d of July Lee's resolution which had been discussed the day previous was adopted. On the 4th of July the "Declaration" from the Committee was adopted by Congress, attested by the signatures of its President and Secretary, and in addition signed by all the members present, except Mr. Dickenson of New York, who "refused to sign it," according to Jefferson. But it did not bear the names as they finally appeared on it, and it was passed unanimously only as regarded States. A majority of the Pennsylvania delegation persistently opposed it, and it was only the absence of two of their delegates on the final vote that left a majority of the State's representatives in its favor. A few days after its passage it was proclaimed at the head of the army at Cambridge, and Congress ordered that it be engrossed on parchment and signed by every member. It was not until the 2nd of August that this was concluded, and the document completed as it is now preserved at Washington. The first paper signed was not preserved. Here, then, we have three important dates: on the 2nd of July was adopted the resolution of independence—the substantial legal act of separation from the British Crown, and it was this day that John Adams prophesied would in future generations be celebrated by just such noisy demonstrations as annually take place; on the 4th of July the declaration of independence was adopted; and on the 2d of August took place the ceremony of signature. It may even be questioned whether an earlier date than either of the above might not dispute the honor, as Congress, on the 15th of May, 1776, adopted a resolution to suppress the exercise of every kind of authority under the British Crown, and that all the powers of Government be henceforth exerted under the authority of the people of the colonies, for the preservation of their peace, liberty, and safety.

But the selection of the Fourth of July was the right one. The "Declaration" (of Independence as it is popularly called) not only affirmed the substantial legal act of separation from Great Britain, but Jefferson also made it a declaration of Republican Government, a political manifesto, and a bill of rights, and it is to-day accepted as the guide of liberty and a source of patriotic inspiration. As such it has obtained the unrivaled admiration of the world, and as such it yet lives in the hearts of our people.

There has been a great deal of discussion as to the precise legal force of the Declaration, and on this point we quote from Mr. Pollard:

> A vague and sometimes popular view is, that its authority, in respect to the rights referred to, is only moral and traditional, that merely of an "address" or homily, no more binding than Washington's "Farewell Address"—a collection, as Mr. Choate would have it, of "glittering generalities." But this view is inconsistent with the true history of what was done on the Fourth of July. The Declaration of Independence was voted upon, clause by clause, as any other act of legislation, and even with a particularity as to its expressions that was extraordinary. It was authenticated in the same way as any other law. It had every ceremony to constitute it a legislative act. The conclusion seems to be irresistible that the document has, and was intended to have, a statutory force, limited only by the generality of its terms; and that it founded in Congress an authority for "appropriate legislation," as in the case of other provisions which it has been usual to establish broadly in the general frame of government, and then to carry out in special laws.

The significance of the 4th of July, 1776, as the birthday of republicanism in America, is undoubtedly its superior one. The separation from England was the lesser event, and, without any further consequences than a successful revolt against an old rule, might have been but little remarkable. A mere change of dynasty is a common enough event in history. It may be imagined how little memorable the Declaration of Independence would have been had the Americans on such event elected another king and continued the old form of government; and indeed such a course would not have been impossible had the professions of affection for royalty which the colonists made almost to the last moment, and which have actually imposed upon some historians, contained a proportion of truth.

The comparative unimportance of the Declaration of Independence as the mere announcement of separation from England, and taking no other than this view of Mr. Jefferson's famous paper, appears yet more striking from the fact that it merely announced a state of things that had already for some time existed. All relations between the British Goverment and the Colonies had been practically dissolved long before the latter chose to publish the fact to the world. In Virginia the British authority had been in effect suspended for two years, and her convention that instructed the motion for independence boasted of the fact. The Continental Congress hesitated to expose the issue, even after it had determined it in its own mind. In the fore part of its session it had adopted measures which already placed the struggle on the footing of foreign war instead of insurrection, and the Colonies were already fighting as an independent power before they found it convenient to declare it. Letters of marque and reprisal had been issued against the enemies of their commerce; the local authorities had been advised to disarm the disaffected; the ports of the country were opened to all nations but Great Britain; negotiations for foreign alliances were directed to be undertaken; it only remained to drop a thin mask, and this was done on the 4th of July, 1776.

Of the literary history of the Declaration there is not much to be said. It was subjected to many amendments and changes, but did not suffer therefrom in character, style or unity of the composition, but on the contrary was improved in force and coherence. One-fifth of the matter as it originally came from Mr. Jefferson was stricken out. Thirty-one amendments were made to the draught reported to Congress; of these the most were verbal, but some went to the sense. Of the latter was notoriously the omission of the paragraph censuring the king of England for the slave-trade, although it is not usually mentioned; and the fact that another part of the omitted paragraph condemned yet more violently, and with a special train of language, England's employment of the negroes as soldiers, Mr. Jefferson describing it as a "fact of distinguished dye" in the "assemblage of horrors," and then emphasizing it in capital letters. Jefferson's temper must have been at fever heat when he wrote the Declaration, and Congress could not keep pace with it. He pursued his accusations against the King of Great Britain beyond what Congress was willing to put on record—and they are tremendously severe as they stand—but the Declaration had to be studiously pruned of reflections which he had made upon the people of England. Mr. Jefferson regarded these omissions as an emasculation of his document, and ascribed them to "the pusillanimous idea that we had friends in England worth keeping terms with."

A distinction of the Declaration, and marking it among all historical events was the plainness and sobriety of the circumstances in which it finally took place on the evening of the 4th of July. There was nothing sensational—no pageantry—only the ordinary ceremonies of legislation. The debates must have been but little memorable, as tradition has not preserved a single sentence of them. The Congress sat with closed doors, and there were no phonograhic reporters. The debate expended itself on the resolution offered by Lee of Virginia, and when the Declaration came to be considered the speeches were probably limited to its literary details, and did not rise above the tone of ordinary business. The Declaration itself supplied a sufficient and incomparable eloquence, and its real and abiding significance is that it is a "declaratory charter" of human rights, as Mr. Jefferson described it.

MATTERS OF MOMENT.

WE are indebted to Mr. J. Heron Foster, an old Pittsburgh friend, now residing in Colorado, for a pamphlet containing an interesting statement of facts concerning the soil, climate, population, wealth, &c., of that "Switzerland of America." The information is interesting, and is said to have been obtained from official sources.

SUGAR has risen a cent and a half per pound in the San Francisco market, owing to the strike in the New York refineries, and the laborers in San Francisco are taxed to keep up their brothers in New York, and at the same time pay higher prices for the necessaries of life. That's how the old thing works, and yet the workingmen believe in Trades' Unions.

THE "FOURTH," which being interpreted, signifies sweltering heat, picnics, fireworks, brass bands, fervid buncombe, "starry flag," and "American eagle" allusions, "gelloorious" country, lemonade, and betimes something stronger, business suspended, general jubilee, and perhaps a connecting thread of patriotism to unite all the extravagances and jollity of the day. The Fourth is upon us.

WHENEVER he hears that visitors are on their way up the road from New York to see him at his farm at Chappaqua, Horace Greeley immediately rises out of his easy chair in his parlor, rolls up his sleeves, pokes his trousers inside of his boot-legs, puts on an old hat, shoulders an ax, rushes to a maple grove near by, and vigorously sets himself at work chopping down trees—the object being to have it noised about, as an electioneering card, that he is hard at work as a farmer and wood-chopper. Old Chappaqua—old Chappaquack—old Chopperquacker.—Chicago Journal.

YESTERDAY our much esteemed editorial friend, Wm. Neeb, Esq., proprietor of the Freheits Freund, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his birth day, and was the recipient of hearty and sincere congratulations from troops of friends, upon the success which has crowned his half century of life—a life that has been filled with activity and usefulness. It gives us pleasure to mingle our good wishes with others and to hope that the years of the future may bring to him a continuance of that abundant prosperity and happiness of which he is in every way worthy.

THOSE of our reader who have sufficient energy these melting July days, to wrestle with Mexican nomenclature will be pleased to learn that latest advices from that country of sensations, show affairs to be in a muddled condition, with the present situation standing thus: The occupation of Saltillo by the insurgent Gen. Trevino is confirmed, as also the report that the general is moving upon Matamoras. Quiroga is advancing upon Camargo. On the other hand Cevallos has arrived in Matamoras with government reinforcements, while Gen. Ayala, the Juarist governor of Nuero Leon has attacked and taken possession of Cerralvo. Cevallos announces his determination to at once enter on an active campaign against the revolutionist forces in the northern part of Mexico.

THE Department of the Interior is sending out exploring expeditions into the comparatively unexplored regions of the West, not only for the purpose of gathering geological knowledge, but with instructions that necessitate reports upon all natural phenomena, the flora, and the mineral wealth of the country through which the expeditions pass. One of these parties will pass through Northern Utah and Idaho Territories to Fort Hall and the valley of the Snake river; the other to Fort Ellis, Montana Territory. This last will be one of the most important topographical surveys ever made. The result of these expeditions, it is thought, will be to incite immigration to the most important points, and form settlements which in turn may become the nucleus of large mining and manufacturing towns.

OUR Dublin correspondent a few days ago gave an interesting account of the exciting topic of the times in Ireland—the Galway election case—in which Chief Justice Keogh, though himself a Catholic, took occasion to severely rebuke the priests for their interference in elections. The manly and courageous action of His Honor caused intense excitement and the Roman Catholic Bishops united in a reply to him, in which they refute some of the charges and deny the rest. The latest advices indicate that this "address" has increased the feeling against the Judge to such an extent that he has been compelled to leave the country, and has been burned in effigy in all the principal towns. It looks as though he never would be permitted to occupy again the Irish Bench.

THE Stokes trial seems to have its peculiar fascination for women: an instance is thus given by the Advertiser: "Notwithstanding all the windows were thrown open, the atmosphere of the court-room was almost stifling. The room was filled with spectators, about fifty or sixty of the number being ladies, who became intensely interested when Fisk's blood-stained garments were brought out and identified by Fisk's colored servant, Marshall. So great was their curiosity that, not content with straining their eyes and stretching their necks, nearly all the women got upon their feet and leaned, with almost breathless interest, over the heads of the reporters and lawyers and watched the nobby darkey while he languidly handled the clothing and thrust his fingers through the tell-tale bullet holes."

PETER THE GREAT.

The Two Hundredth Anniversary of His Birth Celebrated.

Russia on the 11th of June celebrated the two-hundreth anniversary of the birth of the Great Peter, the Father of the Russian Empire and the founder of its future greatness. St. Petersburg, as the monument of his genius, was naturally in all respects the place, par excellence, in which to honor him to whom, of all Russian sovereigns, honor is due. For three weeks past immense preparations have been made, whole streets and thoroughfares have been blocked up, stands have been constructed on the Isaac's Plain for the convenience of the grand monde who were not to take an active part in the ceremonies of the day, and invitations—that is, orders—were sent to the inhabitants of the houses lining the principal streets and squares to decorate their dwellings and to provide for the illuminations of the evening. Corporations have been brushing up their dusty banners, which seldom see the light of day; the gay world, too, has been getting ready its best attire; and soldiers at a distance from the town have been marching towards the suburbs of the city, so as to be prepared to add to the eclat of the day's proceedings. This morning, at seven o'clock, a salute of twenty-one guns announced to the inhabitants the commencement of the solemnities, and at nine o'clock deputations from the nobility of the city and Government of St. Petersburg proceeded to the little house of Peter the Great, which is situated on the banks of the Neva. Here the nobility were met by the Court clergy; and the whole party, preceded by an image of the Saviour borne aloft, paid a visit to the tomb of Peter, in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul within the fortress. Before arriving at the latter place, the procession was met by the clergy of the cathedral, who received the image, and marched in a body to the fortress, where, it must be remembered, is situated the church containing the tombs of the Imperial family, from Peter downwards. At the cathedral were collected the various souvenirs of Peter the Great, dating from the battle of Poltava, in which he gained a signal victory over his rival and determined antagonist, Charles XII. of Sweden. For instance, there were the uniform of Peter and his gorget arranged on the cushion; his hat, which was pierced by a ball during the aforesaid battle, and his sword, occupied another cushion, on which was also embroidered in silver the memorable order of the day: "As to Peter, know that life is little to him, provided that Russia lives in glory and prosperity for your happiness." On another cushion, placed in front of these, was a gold medal struck in honor of Peter, and as a souvenir of the solemnities of the day. From an early hour this morning the troops have been in motion; the regiments of the Guard in their splendid holiday uniform, with bright furbished arms, battalions of the line, and an artillery which musters more than one 100 guns, have been converging towards Isaac's Plain—the great centre of operations. In the church were posted detachments of the Preobrajensky and Simioneffsky regiments, while outside were drawn up lines of cavalry and infantry, composed of three representatives of all the regiments dating from the time of Peter, with their standards of the same epoch. On the arrival of the Imperial family and great dignitaries of the Court, a funeral service was celebrated at the tomb of Peter, with all the pomp and splendor of the Greek ritual, by Isidore, the Metropolitan of Novgorod and St. Petersburg, the termination of which ceremony was announced by a salute of thirty-one guns from the fortress. As soon as the Emperor had quitted the cathedral the image of the Saviour and the souvenirs of Peter were transported through the gates of the fortress to the banks of the Neva. Here another cortege was formed, consisting of steamboats and smaller craft—one bearing the image; another the yawl constructed by Peter's own hands; another the Metropolitan Isidore and the Archbishops who took part in the service; a fourth, the Grand Duchesses, attended by the ladies of the Court; a fifth, the Council of the Empire, the Ministers, Members of the Senate, and deputations from the nobility; others containing representatives of the Army and Navy, the Captain of the Port of St. Petersburg, and deputations from the Imperial and river yacht clubs. It was a grand and stirring sight as the procession moved off—the effect being heightened by the booming of cannon, the deep tone of the gigantic bells of St. Isaac and the neighboring churches, and the solemn music of the military bands disposed in the vessels between which the procession directed its course. On leaving the Cathedral the Emperor set off to the Isaac's Plain, where mounted on horseback, and accompanied by his aides-de-camp and a long suite of officers, rode along the lines of troops until the cortege had arrived at its destination, and had landed its precious relics. Another procession was now formed, headed by all the corporations in St. Petersburg; and, with this addition, passing in its course the celebrated monument of Peter the Great, it slowly moved towards the Isaac's Church, where, as at every place, extra ordinary preparations had been made for the worthy celebration of the great event. Here the image of the Saviour, which, from its special connection with the great military successes of Peter, plays so conspicuous a part in the day's proceedings, was received by one of the Archbishops, who had advanced to meet it at the head of the dignitaries of the Church, with their rich and gaudy banners and crosses. Another grand service was then performed by the Metropolitan, in presence of all the elite of Russia, for the accommodation of whom special preparations had been made by the authorities of the Church. So soon as the service in the Isaac's Church was terminated, the whole procession, with the exception of the corporations, once more set off in the same order as before to the foot of the monument of Peter, which had already been adorned with plants and flowers. Here a third and final religious service was performed before the image of the Saviour, in the presence of the Emperor and the whole body of troops, together with the tens—one may almost say hundreds—of thousands of eager and enthusiastic spectators of the extraordinary scene. On the conclusion of the prayers for the prolongation of the days of his Imperial Majesty and all his family, and for the prosperity of the Russian Empire, the Metropolitan sprinkled the standards and other souvenirs of the Great Peter with holy water; and at the same moment a salvo of 100 guns from the fortress, as well as from all the artillery stationed on the Admiralty Plain and on the quay, accompanied, as a matter of course, by the ringing of the bells of all the churches in the capital, announced the termination of the religious ceremony of the day. The proceedings—that is, so far as the official ceremony was concerned—were brought to a conclusion by the return of all the relics to the fortress, and a march of all the troops past the monument of the hero of the day. St. Petersburg will long remember this commemoration of the birth of its great founder.

JUST A THOUGHT.

BY FRANCIS DANA GAGE.

If we never wasted our sunshine,
Or hung it in borrowed shrouds,
We might save enough, most any day,
To gild to-morrow's clouds.

And even if rain came pouring,
Now and then, a chilling stream,
If garnered well, we'd have in store
For every drop, a beam.

THE Toledo Blade says: "It is a good thing to take care of one's relations, if it be done in a modest quiet way. Grant appointed his father postmaster at Covington, Ky., at the insignificant salary of $800. John T. Hoffman (who is to be made United States Senator instead of Conkling, in case the Cincinnati coalition is successful) made his father-in-law, Starkweather, commissioner of the Church street widening at New York, whereby he mede $650,000 in four years."

TRUSSES.

Every kind of Trusses for the cure of Rupture may be obtained at Dr. Keyser's establishment, No. 167 Liberty street. It is a matter of the greatest consequence that all who are ruptured should be properly fitted with a suitable truss, and one that will keep the ruptured parts in their place. Many persons do not know when they are ruptured, and frequently years are allowed to pass by before anything is done.

Rupture is too serious an injury to be treated with lightness or neglect, especially when the means for its relief and cure are so easily obtained. Children and young persons are easily cured, with the improved appliances which are constantly being added to the great variety which Dr. Keyser always has on hand.

Dr. Keyser's office, 167 Liberty street, from 10 A. M. until 1 P. M., and from 3 to 6, and on Saturdays at night.

The Career of a Great Remedy.

Twenty summers have elapsed since it was briefly announced that a new vegetable tonic and alterative, bearing the name of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, had been added to the list of Preventive and Restorative medicines. The modest advertisement which invited attention to the preparation stated that it had been used with great success, in private practice, as a cure for dyspepsia, bilious complaints, constipation and intermittent fever. It was soon discovered that the article possessed extraordinary properties. The people, of every class, tested its merits as a tonic, stimulant, corrective and restorative, and found that its effects more than fulfilled their hopes and expectations. From that time to the present its course has been upward and onward, and it stands to-day at the head of all medicines of its class, American or imported, in the magnitude of its sales and its reputation as a safe, agreeable and potent invigorant and restorative. For languor and debility, lack of appetite and gastric disturbances, so common during the summer months, it is absolutely infallible. Indigestion, bilious disorders, constipation, nervousness, periodical fevers, and all the ordinary complaints generated by a vitiated and humid atmosphere, vanish under its renovating and regulating influence. This is its record, avouched by volumes of intelligent testimony, extending over a period of a fifth of a century, and comprehending the names of thousands of well-known citizens belonging to every class and calling. In Europe it is thought a great thing to obtain the patronage of royalty for a "patent medicine," but Hostetter's Bitters has been spontaneously approved by millions of independent sovereigns, and its patent consists in their endorsement.

DAILY GAZETTE.

FINANCE AND TRADE.

OFFICE OF PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1872.

The warm weather, and the fact that the Fourth of July is at hand, added increased dullness to the money circles of this city to-day. Financial matters were never healthier in this locality than they are at the present, the banks being fully able to meet all the wants of legitimate trade, and the present aspect of business forbids and anything like putting on the brakes. The car of prosperity is on a straight track, and from all signs now apparent, the road from now till the close of the year is to be a bee line. Caution, however, is at all times commendable, and the reader is advised to keep, as far as possible, all business matters he may engage in under his own control. For the bank or capitalist that is eager to accommodate him to-day, may, four months hence, decide that he must find some other resource to get the means from to prosecute his business or carry on any operation or improvement that he may be engaged in. The large number of discount houses in this neighborhood gives a reasonable assurance that the moderately prudent have no cause to fear for want of bank accommodation. Nevertheless, it is always better to have two or three strings to one's bow, for fear of accidents. A gentleman, very highly esteemed in this community for his many good qualities, has often given the advice "Never keep too many eggs in one basket." The advice has been followed by at least one of his friends, and it turned out profitably. So the reader, when going into any new operation, should always, so far as possible, secure himself from being tripped up or annoyed for want of proper comprehension of what may happen in the future or putting his all into any one investment, as in case of trouble or failure he might be left without any resource.

Business, although confined to the immediate wants of consumption to-day, was tolerably active. In stocks there is but little doing. We hear of some Citizens Bank stock changing hands, at $71,50. In real estate, notwithstanding the intense heat, there continues much activity.

Since our report of yesterday, the National Trust Company, and Masonic Deposit Savings Banks have declared a semi-annual 5 per cent. dividend.

Cincinnati Iron Market.

CINCINNATI, July 2.—The market is a shade easier for No. 1 charcoal foundry pig iron, but the demand is generally equal to the supply. Malleable iron is in only moderate demand, and there is some cutting of rates, chiefly on sheet iron, but no quotable change in prices. We quote: Pig iron—Hot blast—No. 1 charcoal foundry per ton $51,00@52,00; No. 2 do, $48,00@50,00; forge, $47,00@48,00. Cold blast—Charcoal, $54@60,00; do car wheel, $55,00@65,00. Hot blast stone coal—No. 1 foundry, $50,00@52.00; No. 2 do, $47,00@50; forge 44,00@48,00; blooms, $110,00@115,00. Scrap iron—Wrought, 1⅞@2¼c; do car, 1¼@1½c.

PITTSBURGH MARKETS.

OFFICE OF THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1872.

Trade in general merchandise is dull and is likely to continue so during the next thirty days or until after harvest; however, business is fair for the season, it is always slow during July. Our produce houses are doing but little aside from green truck, and it will soon be cut down from the fact that the gardners will soon supply the markets. There has been an increased demand for eggs during the past week, and prices have ruled higher than in almost any other market in the country; however, it is not likely that present prices, 20@21 cts, will be sustained long. Flour is dull and weak though without quotable change, and the same is true of all kinds of grain. Groceries moderately active though the market in a general way presents but little that is really new or important. Hay is steady in consequence of continued light receipts, but the demand is only fair and prices are unchanged. There are no established quotations for potatoes; dealers generally are working them off as best as they can, accepting just what buyers see proper to give. High wines steady and the stock in this market is small. Pig iron is firmer while finished iron and nails are quiet, though not any more so than is usual at this season of the year. The most of the steel mills are still in blast but they are working up old orders. Window glass is quiet; however, stocks are light and prices are firm but unchanged.

LIVE STOCK MARKET.

CENTRAL STOCK YARDS, EAST LIBERTY,
WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1872.

CATTLE.

Trade has been exceedingly dull thus far, unusually so, and what is worse still there is but little prospect of any improvement. With a heavy supply, all the pens at noon to-day were full to overflowing, unfavorable advices from the east, combined with the oppressively hot weather, operators generally are inactive and rather discouraged, and there is little or no incentive to buy for shipment, notwithstanding prices are generally considered low, as shippers have done no good for several weeks. Cattle that were considered cheap here at the time of purchase, were subsequently discovered to be dear enough by the time they reached Philadelphia and New York, and in not a few instances had to be closed out at a heavy loss. This being the case, shippers are very fearish this week, and with good reason too; they have suffered pretty severely of late and besides there is nothing in the trade just now to stimulate business; the markets are usually hard at this season of the year; hot weather has a very depressing effect on the butcher's sales, as it curtails the consumption of fresh meats very materially, and, then again, the abundance of vegetables and small fruit is not without its effect.

The average quality was again common, the great bulk of the offerings consisting of green slippery stock, and as might, be expected good cattle are selling the most readily, though prices for all kinds are lower. Extra 1,300 to 1,500 steers may be quoted at 6,25 to 6,50; prime 1100 to 1200, 5,50@6; good 1000 to 1100, 5@5½; stock cattle, 3¼@3½; rough and common 3@4 cents.

SHEEP.

The receipts up to this writing (Wednesday noon), have been comparatively small footing up about 30 cars of which some 1200—14 cars are in the pens unsold. Thus it will be seen that notwithstanding the arrivals were comparatively light up to this writing the supply was in excess of the demand, and it can also be inferred from this that trade was and continues very dull, while prices, as compared with last week, have still further declined. We now quote prime to extra 95 to 100 lbs sheep at 5¼ to 5½, prime 85 to 90 lbs, 4½@5c; good 75 to 80 lbs, $4@4¼c; common 70 to 75 lbs; $3,50@3,75. Lambs are also dull and prices lower; notwithstanding the supply was by no means large; now quote at 4 to 6 cents.

HOGS.

The receipts thus far have been comparatively small and are likely to continue so during the balance of the week; trade was very sluggish on Monday and Tuesday, but to-day, with an increased demand and a light supply, the feeling was a shade better though prices were without quotable change. Prime to extra Philadelphia hogs, $4,30 to 4,40; good to prime Yorkers, $4 to 4,15; rough and common, 3½ @ 4c; the general expectation is that the market will do better within the next week, and this is based on the supposition that the oppressively hot weather will curtail the receipts, and there is no disputing but what it does have this effect.

PETROLEUM MARKET.

OFFICE OF PITTSBURGH GAZETTE,
WEDNESDAY, July 3, 1872.

Crude continues dull and weak, and prices have still further declined; sales to-day at Parker at $3,70 net. Refined is quiet, which is owing, in part, to the fact that many of the eastern operators are absent from their posts in consequence of the hot weather; prices, however, are steady at 22¼ for first, and 22⅜ for last half of July; and 22⅜ for first, and 22½ for last half of August.

Oil barrels are quiet and unchanged; $1,75 and $1,85 for country and city.

RIVER NEWS.

The river continues to recede steadily at this point, with 3 feet 2 inches in channel. Weather continues oppressively hot, though cloudy at times, with strong indications. A storm passed around northward about noon, and another rise out of the Allegheny soon is not improbable.

The Juniata arrived from Cincinnati on Tuesday night with a good trip; she was obliged to lighten, and it was this that delayed her arrival. As will be seen by card, she will take her departure again this morning.

The Carrie Brooks, from Wheeling, arrived and departed as usual, with fair trips each way. Morris Daisey came up on her, but is still too weak to resume his duties in the office.

The West Virginia and Messenger will be engaged in picnicking to-day.

The Juniata will receipt passengers and freight through to St. Louis.

The Exchange was due last evening, and will doubtless be found in port this morning. As will be seen by card, she will return to Cincinnati, leaving on Saturday morning. Captain Ed. Evans is in command, and Mr. J. M. Vandergrift is in charge of the office.

—The Treasury department has promulgated the act of Congress of April 9, 1872, for the information of all concerned to the effect that any person or persons, or body corporate, having more than one-half ownership in any vessel, shall have the same power to remove a captain who is in part owner of such vessel as such majority owners now have to remove a captain not an owner, provided that act shall not apply where there is a valid written agreement subsisting by virtue of which such captain would be entitled to possession, nor in any case where a captain has possession as part owner obtained before the passage of this act.

—An unfortunate affair occurred on the Ben. Franklin Monday morning, resulting in the death of the texas-tender, Ed Hukle by name. He was performing his usual duties in the Captain's room, and had taken up a loaded pistol to examine, when he accidentally discharged it. The weapon was pointed toward himself, and the load took effect in his abdomen. At Warsaw he was taken ashore and the best medical skill called in to save him, but without avail, as he expired at 12 o'clock Monday. He was a white man and called Missouri his home.

—The Cincinnati Chronicle of Tuesday says: Pilot W. H. Hall and John T Ragon came down on the Tom Lysle. They report the Bengal Tiger having stuck three of her barges on Buffalo on Saturday. One was badly struck, but it was thought the other two could be got off. They are not in the way. Messrs Hall and Ragon leave for Pittsburgh to-night on the Tom Lysle, which boat takes up an empty tow.

—The sternwheeler Importer, some years ago, made the run from Benton to Sioux City in six days and five hours, the best run on record, is is asserted, and a run that has never since been beaten.

—The Messenger, in command of Capt. Samuel Evans, will make regular trip to-day to McKee's Rock, where there is to be a picnic. She will leave on her first trip this morning at 8 o'clock.

—Captain S. D. Elliott's new White River steamer, City of Augustains, is fast approaching completion at New Albany, and will be ready for business about the 12th proximo.

—Capt James F. Allen, a well known steamboat agent of New Orleans, died suddenly Friday morning, of apoplexy, at his residence on St. Charles street.

—Thos. S. McLaren has libelled the steamer Hamilton at New Orleans, and the Marshal will sell her on July 8th.

—The Collier and Mary Davage arrived at St. Louis on Monday.

The following are the returns made by the various county officers to County Controller Warner, showing the amount of fees received during the month of June: A. Hilands, Clerk of Orphan's Court, $288 00; Joseph H. Gray, County Register, $486 92; Hugh S. Fleming, Sheriff, $2,365 44; Thomas H. Hunter, Recorder, $351 02; Joseph S. Ross, Prothonotary, $1,703 05.

Handsome Decoration.

The well known florists and gardeners, Messrs. John and A. Murdock, of No. 112 Smithfield street, last evening raised a very handsome evergreen motto across Penn avenue at the forks of the road. The inscription reads: "The wooden road—the pride of the Iron city." The letters which are of the most beautiful green are worked in wire frames and have a beautiful appearance. The work of raising the device was intrusted to Mr. John M. Patterson, who executed it with much skill.

Cruelty to Animals.

Anthony Briegel made an information before Mayor Callow against Jacob Desset, charging him with cruelty to animals. If the allegations prove correct, the defendant must indeed be a heartless wretch, deserving the most severe penalties of the law. The plaintiff being duly sworn, deposes that on or about the first instant the defendant did wilfully, maliciously, &c., take in his hand a stick with which he deliberately struck a cat belonging to deponent. A warrant has been issued by Mayor Callow, and the cruel Jacob will have to answer the grave charge. Fellow "felines" should not make the Mayor wondrous kind.

Kicked by a Horse.

A little son of Walter Stephenson on Tuesday came to tell his father who is a member of the the Friendship Fire Company of Allegheny, that dinner was ready. The father went to another part of the engine house for a moment, when he heard a loud cry from the child. He hastened to the spot and found that one of the horses had kicked the child, knocking him a distance of eight or ten feet. He was taken to his home and Dr. Hamilton was called and dressed the wound. A frightful gash was cut in the child's forehead, and he is in a very precarious condition.

Charged with Perjury.

During last March an information was made before Alderman McMasters by George W. Gregg, of Turtle Creek, charging L. H. Amhurst with fraudulently raising a check. The plaintiff alleged that the check had been drawn for $25, but that the defendant had raised it to $45. The case was sent to the grand jury and the bill ignored. Yesterday Mr. Amhurst made an information before Alderman McMasters, charging Mr. Gregg with wilful and corrupt perjury. Amhurst alleges that he did not raise the check, as he had two checks, one for $25, and one for $45, both of which were genuine. Gregg was arrested, and gave bail of one thousand dollars for court.

Another Race Between Butler and Scharff.

From present appearances it seems probable that Butler, the Boston oarsman, will have a fair opportunity to obtain satisfaction in another race with Pittsburgh's successful "rowist," Scharff. It will be remembered that Butler challenged Scharff, after their Philadelphia race, to row him again over the same course. To this Scharff at first objected, offering, however to row him at Pittsburgh, allowing him one hundred and fifty dollars for his expenses. Butler would not consent to this, and now Scharff accedes to his (Butler's) first proposition, and agrees to row him over the same course as their race of June 7th, for one thousand dollars a side, at any time between the 15th and 30th of July, but not at a stipulated weight. This proposition seems fair enough, and it is to be hoped that the Boston man will accept it without any further newspaper quibbling.

Was it a Suicide?

On last Tuesday about noon an elderly man who was considerably intoxicated, was observed near the river bank near Fawcett's mill at Soho. He continued to wander around that locality for several hours until he finally disappeared very suddenly and since then nothing has been seen of him. The ferryman at that point, Mr. Fagan had observed his movements and after his disappearance walked toward where he had last seen the man. There he found lying on a raft in the river, a coat and hat which he immediately identified as those worn by the unknown man. The articles brought to the central station house, but as yet nothing further is known as to their owner. The coat is an old fashioned one of black cloth, and the pocket contained a pair of spectacles. The hat is of black felt. The appearances seem to indicate that the man has committed suicide by drowning, but the sequel may prove otherwise.

Protest Against a Hospital.

The people of the Sixth ward are again aroused by the announcement that the Board of Health is about to purchase the house of Mr. Barr, located on Stevenson street, immediately opposite the Mercy Hospital, for use as a sort of pest house. It will be recollected that last year there were strong remonstrances and protests made in this ward against the establishment of another hospital there, but notwithstanding, nearly every case of small-pox was taken there. When the Mercy Hospital became insufficient to accommodate all a building on the corner of Bluff and Pride streets was taken possession of. The result is well know. The ward was made the receptacle of every case of contagious disease, and families resident in the ward suffered therefor. In no ward were the deaths from small-pox so great. No wonder that the people are this season again up in arms against the move mentioned. They have suffered enough and they protest against the establishment of another permanent hospital in the same locality. We hear that a public meeting is to be held to take action in the matter.

The fact is that Hospitals for the reception of cases with contagious diseases should not be located in the city; if they are there is no quarter that can be selected from whence there will be loud and well founded protests.

Practical Friendship—A Pleasant Episode.

It is always pleasant for us to hear that we have friends, but we are doubly pleased when those who are reported to have fraternal feelings toward us manifest them in a practical and unmistakable way. This bit of philosophy will, we think, be concurred in by our genial friend Deputy Mayor Nichols, because he has just had a practical exemplification of its truth. For some time past his Honor has been engaged in fitting up his office on Butler street, and has succeeded in making a complete transformation—the change putting him in possession of one the neatest magisterial sanctums in the city. The "dedication" or final possession of the rejuvenated headquarters was fixed for Tuesday night, when a number of friends assembled to inspect the premises and pass upon its merits. While they were engaged in this way one of them seized by a happy idea, drew up a paper and circulated it without the knowledge of the Deputy. In a short time the dollar subscriptions (no one was allowed to give more than a dollar) had reached a goodly sum which was invested in a luxurious easy chair, in which their magisterial friend could enjoy comfort while dispensing equal justice to all. The furniture was decorated with flags, red, white and blue ribbons, &c., and before the Deputy understood the movement, it had been removed to his sanctum, and he was listening to the "presentation address" from Mr. G. R. Pearson who performed his part very effectively. Having taken by surprise the recipient—who is never at a loss what to say—first gratefully acknowledged his appreciation of this spontaneous expression of friendship and then practically indicated his feeling by inviting the company to supper, prepared by Naser. An hour or two was spent around the festive board, speeches being made by Messrs. G. R. Pearson, Wm. Walton, E. F. Pearson and a number of others. The affair throughout was highly enjoyable, alike pleasant to the recipient of the useful testimonial, as well as to his friends who were glad to have an opportunity thus to express their friendship.

Death of Hon. Joseph Means.

The Steubenville Herald of Tuesday evening gives the following particulars of the sudden death of the Hon. Joseph Means:

"Mr. Means has been in ill health for several days, but stated yesterday that he felt better. He retired last evening early, and about nine o'clock Colonel George W. McCook, an intimate friend of Mr. Means, called at his residence to see him. A messenger was sent to his bed room, and returned stating that he was asleep. Colonel McCook left the house without furthur inquiry. No one visited his room until this morning after eight o'clock, when a servant knocked at the door, receiving no response, the door was opened. The bed room opens into a bath-room, and Mr. Means was found lying, face down, between the two rooms, dead. A slight cut was on the forehead, where he had fallen, and the appearance of the body, as we learn from Dr. Johnson, who was first summoned, was, that he died of apoplexy. Mr. Means was in the fifty-first year of his age."

The Steubenville News says of the deceased: "It is difficult to mention a person whose loss would be more generally felt than that of Mr. Means. He was a prominent iron manufacturer and has been identified with almost every project of public improvement in the city for years past. He was a member of the City Council continuously from 1855 to 1866, and in 1871 he was again elected to that position, polling a heavier vote in his ward than any other candidate on the ticket. He also represented this county in the Ohio Legislature in 1861 and '62, and, we believe, gave full satisfaction to his constituents.

In business affairs his judgment was as much respected as in those of a more public character. He was a Director in the Gas Company and in the Jefferson Insurance Company, and was President of the Steubenville Coal and Mining Company, and of the new Furnace and Iron Company. He was also Director of the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati & St. Louis Railroad.

Mr. Means was a member of the vestry of St. Paul's Church, this city.

It will be remembered that Mr. Means was the gentleman who so handsomely entertained the Greys on their visit to Steubenville on Decoration day.

The Eleventh Ward Board of School Directors advertise elsewhere this morning for applications for the positions of assistant teachers in their schools. 6

THE FOURTH.

Preparations for its Celebration—The Penn Avenue Festival—Picnics and Excursions—Where to Spend the Day.

To-day—the glorious Fourth—the anniversary of the birthday of this nation, will be celebrated in this city in a more complete manner than ever before in the history of Pittsburgh. The main object of public interest will be of course the jubilee, in celebration of the completion of Penn avenue, but other and less ostentatious modes have also been chosen for honoring Independence Day.

THE CARNIVAL.

The arrangements for the grand carnival, barbecue, etc., are about completed, and everything indicates that the affair will be a complete success. The number of entries are increasing and the prospects for a day brimfull of fun are decidedly encouraging. The procession will partake largely of the Humorous, and in itself will be quite a success. Ample accommodation will be afforded in the way of seats for the throngs, and refreshment booths have already been erected.

The procession will form in front of City Hall on Smithfield street, and the line of march will be directly to Penn avenue, and thence to the eastern terminus, where the column will countermarch and return to Winebiddle's grove. The committee are determined to leave nothing undone to make the people enjoy the day, and it rests with the people alone whether the efforts of the committee shall be crowned with success. An extended programme of the day's proceedings has already been published in the "GAZETTE."

The staff of the grand-marshall will report on Sixth avenue, right resting on Smithfield street, at 7:30 A. M., in dark clothes, dark fatigue hat, and badges.

PIC NICS.

The members of Mechanics Lodge No. 9, I. O. O. F., will give a pic nic at Glenwood grove. These annual festivals under the auspices of No. 9 have always been looked forward to with much pleasure and they have always been so admirably managed as to make the occasions enjoyable to all present. This year will be no exception to this rule. The music will be furnished by the Mozart Band and figures by Col. Joe. Christy.

To-day the glorious Fourth of July will be celebrated by the noble St. Joseph's Beneficial Society of East Liberty, by a grand carnival pic nic at McFarland's grove. There will be a splendid band of music present, and quoit pitching, greased pole climbing, Jack races and greased pig chases will enliven the occasion. No where else can the great holiday be better spent, and we earnestly advise all our friends to hie away to the grove to-day if they would enjoy it in a sensible and innocent manner.

M'Kees Rocks will be the scene of gay sports all day, the picnic by the Eagle and horse-racing on the new driving-track being the prominent features. The steamers McCormick and Messenger will leave at 8 A. M., and every hour thereafter throughout the day. Orr's grove, Mount Washington, will also be the scene of festivities; and, indeed, about all the groves near the city will be crowded with pleasure-seekers. The Æolus club wind up the day with a grand leap-year ball at City Hall, where they propose to allow the ladies in attendance to draw for a five-octave piano. A steamboat excursion will leave for Monongahela city in the morning, returning at night.

THEATRES.

At the Pittsburgh Opera House, Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels will give two performances, afternoon and evening. This company is the best that has ever visited the city, and is well worth seeing. The performances are just the kind to enjoy in hot weather.

Major Burnell will give six shows at the Museum on Fifth avenue.

THE COURTS.

Yesterday's Proceedings.

DISTRICT COURT—JUDGE KIRKPATRICK ON THE BENCH.

A hearing was had yesterday morning in the case of Maggie Datte, aged eleven years, the particulars of which have been already published in the GAZETTE. The brother, Gustavus Datte, stated to the court that he had obtained a good situation for his sister, but that Mr. John P. Smith, who resides on Jones avenue, in this city, had refused to let her have her liberty. The girl is exceedingly bright and intelligent. In reply to questions of the court she said she was anxious to go to the place which her brother had provided, as her sister is there. At the instance of the respondent the hearing was continued until Friday morning, in order to enable him to show that he had cared for the child properly, and that he had ample means to maintain her.

CRIMINAL COURT—JUDGE STERRETT ON THE BENCH.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth vs. S. Floersheim charged with fornix et cet, had not agreed upon a verdict at the time Court adjourned.

John Fogan was tried on an indictment for felonious assault and battery. A verdict of not guilty was rendered by the jury.

The case of Joseph Grimes, Robert Boyd and Geo. Grady, indicted for assault and battery with intent to commit rape, was next taken up. The defendants were charged with assaulting the wife of a peddler on the Beaver road, near Sewickly. They were tried at the December term and were convicted, but a new trial was awarded. This morning, by permission of the Court, a nolle pros. was entered as to Boyd and Grady, and Grimes plead guilty to committing an assault and battery.

James Carney, of Reserve township, plead guilty to indictments for selling liquor on Sunday, and with selling without license. Sentence deferred until Saturday.

Humans share with Horses the benefits deprivable from the world-renowned MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The most irrefragable testimony establishes the fact that this wondrous balm exerts the same soothing and healing influence when applied to the human cuticle, that it does in cases of spavin, founders, ringbone, poll evil, scratches, wind gall and other ailments of the horse which require outward treatment. It is, in fact, the most effectual of all external remedies for rheumatism, gout, stiffness of the neck, neuralgia, sore throat, swellings, cuts and bruises of all kinds. T-TH&S

Correction.—By an inadvertency we omitted the name of Miss Mary Fleming in our report of teachers elected in the Franklin District. Miss Fleming was unanimously elected to the position and is one of the most efficient and faithful teachers in the city.

RENEWING ITS YOUTH.

A Business Revival—Increased Prosperity of an Old House—Enlargement of Facilities—New and Elegant Stock of Goods—Messrs. Tate, Munden & Tate's New Store.

Trade has its romance as well as its stern and more practical realities, and if the rise and progress of some of our leading business houses—their successes and discouragements, the obstacles in the way of their progress and their triumph over all, were combined, in a connected narrative, the literary consolidation would fill a volume, to which the reader would often turn even in preference to the most fascinating romance. Pittsburgh could furnish abundant material for these business romances, the facts of which would possess—at least to the younger portion of the business community, not only much entertainment, but much that would be worthy of careful study. Recent developments in connection with one of the most substantial firms of the city, which were brought to our notice the other day, recalled a few points in the "story of the house" which seemed to possess a new interest, as they came up again fresh in our memory. It was years ago, when a great portion of what we now call the city, was but a forest, and when Pittsburgh ranked not as the thirteenth, but away down in the list of great cities in the Union—that the house in question was founded by a skilled mechanic—a plumber and gas fitter, who set up the first establishment of the kind west of the Allegheny Mountains. The beginning was not pretentious, but was fully up to the standard of the times and the magnitude of the business. The chief characteristics of the founder of the new house were excellence in workmanship and promptitude in the execution of all orders. Business rapidly increased, and as the years rolled on the founder of the house kept fully abreast of the times, employing none but the best workmen, and maintaining the same care in the faithful performance of every contract. It was not long before the new firm gained a place among the "most reliable" in the city, while at the same time the skill and energy of its founder, were commensurately rewarded. After the lapse of a score of years, a new element was introduced, and the labors of the business—which had grown with the growth of the city—were divided among younger partners who had entered into the work with an enthusiasm which gave a new impetus to every department. Gradually the senior member of the firm withdrew from all active participation. But the same unvarying characteristics were maintained, and the firm never ceased to prosper until two establishments were found necessary, and a branch was inaugurated in Allegheny. The result was that the firm became widely known throughout Western Pennsylvania, and was looked upon as the leading headquarters for the class of goods and work which it made a specialty.

At the retiracy of the original founder the house was reorganized, his two sons and a third gentleman uniting in the co-partnership, which has since been known as Tate, Munden & Tate. The business continued under the auspices of this new organization for a number of years, until it was found necessary to enlarge their facilities. The result was the erection of the elegant new building, No. 313 Liberty street, head of Smithfield, where the Pittsburgh branch of the firm is now located, having taken possession a few days ago.

The new house is well arranged, and will afford every facility for their increasing business. The first floor is taken up in front, by the general salesman, in the center, by the neat business office, and in the rear, by the workshop, in which are all the appliances for finishing the work. Up stairs a large room has been elegantly carpeted and fitted up as a parlor for the exhibition of samples of chandeliers and gas fixtures,—and in the rear is the storage room, which is filled with one of the best assortments ever brought to the city.

A walk through the building gives some idea of the patronage enjoyed by the firm, and of their facilities for supplying the wants of every patron. First on the list comes the stock of chandeliers and gas fixtures, which are all of the latest patterns,—some of them having no counterparts in the city and all just fresh from the manufactory. An inquiry as to prices revealed to us the fact that the goods could be purchased as cheap as at the manufactories—with the advantage to the purchaser of a saving in freight and boxing—which any who has ever tried shipping will know is considerable. We saw one twelve-light chandelier of an entirely new pattern which was only ticketed $36. There were others of a different style and material for $75, and—to suit the purses of all—the stock contained still others which could be secured for $4. A noticeable feature of the chandeliers was the new material of which they are constructed—so perfect a resemblance to the genuine bronze that it could not be distinguished from the original. Thus a desirable color is secured, and yet a reasonable price put upon it. The "parlor" was filled with these chandeliers, every style and variety with globes and burners of all kinds, and for every room, hall, parlor, library or kitchen in such variety that the eye wearied at the display. One hardly know which to commend most—the beauty of the articles or their comparatively marvellous cheapness. The firm make a specialy of this branch of the business—gas fitting—and believe they have facilities that will enable them to do the work cheaper and better than any other in the city.

After an examination of this stock we visited the store-room, and found a general assortment of goods, including lead pipe, rubber hose for hydrants, steam and wooden pumps, hydrant boxes, wash stands, bath tubs, fountains for parlors and gardens, in short, everything that could be mentioned in the line of their trade. The stock has just been laid in fresh, and everything is new and of the best character. They propose to attend to gas and steam fitting, and plumbing in all its branches, and have accordingly made the most ample preparations to satisfy their patrons.

A trip through the establishment and other evidences which we had of the renewed spirit of enterprise which is influencing the firm, could not but lead us to conclude that the old house whose history dates back a generation, has indeed renewed its youth, and was about entering upon a new career of prosperity. It was with more than ordinary pleasure that we recorded these evidences of success, and in coming away we felt that it was just such a house as could be confidently recommended to the public. We, therefore, with sincerity, cordially recommend our friends who have anything in their line which they wish attended to, promptly and in the best manner, to leave their orders and make their purchases of Messrs. Tate, Munden & Tate, 313 Liberty street.

What the Buckeyes Say.

TIFFIN, O., July 25, 1871.

We, the undersigned, have had the Munson Copper Tubular Lightning Rod, erected on our buildings, and take pleasure in recommending the Munson Rod to all parties who desire to secure a good rod. We regard it as far superior to anything of the kind now sold, the large amount of surface, the high conducting power of the metal, its perfect connections, the fact that it does not rust, and the perfect manner in which the agent does his work are all features which will recommend the Munson Rod above all others.

Simplicity.

The "DOMESTIC" Sewing Machine stands unrivaled for simplicity of construction. 1st. It has a direct and powerful action on the needle bar, operating the same with a simple and powerful motion. 2d. The feed motion is obtained from the same shaft that operates the needle bar. 3d. Motion is given to the shuttle from the same shaft, by means of a light and simple, but strong and effective device. By thus avoiding the grinding of cams, ratling of cog wheels, and the consequent wear and friction attending them, there results a SILENT MACHINE. R. W. Steadman & Co., No. 20 Sixth avenue.

In anticipation of the summer trade Messrs. Workman & Davis, our well known carriage makers, supplied themselves with a fine lot of buggies, barouches, carriages and road wagons for pleasure driving, which are on exhibition and for sale—every vehicle warranted—at their warerooms, Nos. 167, 169 and 171 Penn street.

QUITE an excitement was occasioned in the neighborhood of the Union Depot, yesterday afternoon, by a loud explosion, which every body imagined to be a boiler explosion. STEAMBOAT DISASTER.

Accident to the Steamer Hope—Eight Persons Injured, Some Fatally.

The Wheeling Register publishes a letter from New Martinsville, West Virginia, which gives the following particulars of an accident on the steamer Hope. The letter is dated July first:

We are called upon to chronicle another horrible steamboat disaster. The middle flue of the boiler of the steamer Hope (Captain Williamson), on the way from Matamoras to Wheeling, collapsed at one o'clock P. M. to-day, while leaving the landing directly opposite this place, blowing fore and aft. Several of the deck hands were blown into the river, besides several passengers jumped overboard. A scene of confusion ensued. The river was soon covered with skiffs from this place and the opposite side containing assistance; those in the river were soon rescued. The following is the list of injured:

R. Hutchinson, mate, scalded seriously.

John Richards, cook, scalded dangerously.

Dan. Cooley, deck hand, scalded severely.

Wm. Mender, deck hand, scalded and bruised severely.

Geo. Sutler, deck hand, scalded and bruised severely.

Several others were more or less injured.

Drs. Young and Priest were soon brought on board to relieve the suffering wounded. A valuable horse and eight head of cattle, belonging to George H. Fauble, of Wheeling Island, were badly scalded. The steamer floated down the river nearly a mile, when the towboat Charlie Brown, on her way to Cincinnati, came along and kindly proffered assistance and towed the Hope back to the mouth of the creek at this place. The officers and crew tender their thanks to the officers of the Charlie Brown for their tenderness and aid. It is impossible at this writing to ascertain the cause of the explosion, but there seems to be a good reason for thinking that the water in the boiler had been allowed to get too low; such at least is the opinion expressed by the officers of the Charlie Brown and by some of the officers and crew of the Hope.

Wonderful Restoration of Speech.

About five years ago, says the Cumberland, (Md.) News, Miss Eliza Hite, now about twenty-three years of age, residing on Bedford street in this city, lost the power of speech entirely from the effects of a cold, and has not, up to Sunday last, uttered a word since. The skill of the best medical advisers of this city and Baltimore was obtained by her distressed parents, but all in vain, and all hope of the restoration of her vocal powers was given up.

On Sunday morning she was returning from church, and was thinking of a particular tune sung by the choir at the services she had just attended, when she found herself unconsciously humming it. She was greatly astonished to hear sounds issuing from her lips, but proceeded to make other experiments, and found that she could speak!

How or where this miraculous cure, if such it can be called, was effected, no one can tell, but the joy of the young lady's parents and friends is so great that they do not trouble themselves much on this head, but are content to look at it as an interposition of Providence. The young lady's joy, as may be imagined, is not unspeakable, and we suppose that after five years of enforced silence, she will have a great deal to talk about for some time to come.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

EDITORS GAZETTE:—The hot season has commenced in earnest, and many are passing through our town on their way to the mountains. The completion of the P. & C. R. R. from Connellsville on through the mountains has diverted most pleasure seekers from this line of travel. Wilson Scott, of New Salem, was kicked in the head by his horse on Wednesday last, and very severely injured. Hon. Andrew Stewart is again confined to his house. The wheat crop in this county is ripening very rapidly, and some farmers have already commenced cutting; taking the whole county, so far as I can hear, there will not be half an average crop. All other grains are doing well, better than expected. Cherries have been tolerably plenty. Apples will be very scarce generally. There was a storm of wind and rain, with some hail, passed through this county on last Thursday, uprooting trees and doing much damage generally, but no person was injured, so far as heard. Our ice-wagon and street-sprinkler are busy trying to keep us cool. S. Y.

Grant and Wilson is the ticket which will sweep the State and the Union, while Urling, Follansbee & Co. will continue to supply both victors and vanquished with the neatest clothing, at the most reasonable prices and on the shortest order, at their establishment Southwest corner of Fifth avenue and Wood streeet.

Stealing a Woman's Arm to Secure a Diamond Ring.

As already stated, among the victims of the recent railroad smash-up at Metuchen, New Jersey, was a Danish couple named Potassen, but two months married, Mr. Pottassen being the son of a Danish nobleman. They were on their bridal tour, and were en route to San Francisco, where Pottassen's brother is Danish Consul. When the terrible crash came all was darkness and confusion for a few moments; but the gentleman soon recovered consciousness, and his first thought was of his bride. An immediate search was made for the lady, who was found beneath a heap of debris, senseless and covered with blood. Upon raising her up her husband was horrified to find that one of her arms had been completely torn off. The unfortunate lady was removed to shelter and the husband began the sickening task of seeking his wife's missing arm. He proclaimed that upon one of the fingers was the diamond wedding ring, a jewel worth many hundred dollars, and instantly a general search was began. Among the prowlers about the wreck was a train hand, who was observed to secrete something under his coat and walk away. He was soon overhauled, and on perceiving that he had been detected he threw down his burden, which proved to be the lost arm. It was picked up by the nobleman, who removed the ring and caused the arm to be taken care of. The lady was brought to St. Barnabas' Hospital in Newark, where she now lies in a fair way of recovery.—N. Y. Herald.

THE sheep in Colorado have long wool, in which dust accumulates during summer. It is said that when grass has gone to seed, the wind carries the seed into the meshes of the fleece. In winter the rain falls, the dust is turned to mud, in which grass grows, and then thousands of sheep may be seen traveling about in verdure clad, and with their pastures on their backs.

LOTS.

Great Inducements Offered!

The owners of this beautiful property have decided, in view of the past great sales, to reduce the price of the Lots, and by so doing to place them within the reach of all. It is useless for us to say that these Lots are the best now offered for sale within the city limits, for it has become an established and well-known fact. This property fronts immediately on the line of the Citizens Passenger Railway, while scarcely 50 yards away runs the A. V. R. R. All the Avenues are 50 feet wide, and many of the Lots contain the Finest Moulding Sand to the depth of 12 and 14 feet. We would recommend every man or woman who can command a little money to buy one or two of the beautiful Lots, and we predict that before three years they will be worth at least double what we are willing to take for them. Call on us, and we will show you all over the grounds.

SILL & SON,

Cor. Butler and 42d Streets.

A Louisville Romance.

Society circles were treated to a startling sensation Thursday afternoon. It was to the effect that a beautiful and accomplished young lady and a well-known young gentleman of this city had been secretly married some time ago, and when the facts become known, last night, the affair was the universal theme of conversation. The facts in this real romance in real life are as follows:

For some time past, Mr. Russell Hancock, son of General W. S. Hancock, and at present connected with the firm of S. T. Suit & Co., Main street, has been paying his addresses to Miss Lizzie, daughter of Nicholas Gwynn, Esq., a well-known Main street merchant, who lives on Fourth street, between Broadway and York. It seems that for some reason Mr. Gwynn objected to the intentions of Mr. Hancock, and preparations were made to send the young lady abroad for two years. Two years is an eternity to young lovers, and they determined that their happiness should not thus be destroyed. On the 30th of April last the young couple very quietly went to Jeffersonville, and were married by the Rev. Dr. Hutchinson. After the cermony the young lady returned to her father's house, and she has remained there until yesterday afternoon.

The avowed intentions of the young people was to keep the marriage secret until the old folks became reconciled to the union, when the marriage would be made public, and the young man would claim his bride. But marriage, as well as murder, will out. One of the parties in the secret imparted it in confidence to a friend, and that friend did likewise.

Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Hancock finding that the secret was known, and would in all probability, reach the ears of his father-in-law, wrote that gentleman a note, giving the full particulars of the case. Before dispatching the note, however, he sent for his wife, and the young couple were registered at the Louisville Hotel last night.

Up to 12 o'clock to-day Mr. Gwynn had not replied to the note, but the probabilities are, that he will give the young folks his blessing.—Ledger.

Reserve.

There is a certain reserve of manner which is always desirable, a modesty, courteousness and quietude which wins the respect it deserves; but this is easily distinguishable from that mental attitude which is ever holding back all that is distinctive of the individual himself, all that is nearest to him and that he most prizes: all that he most truly loves and is, from the sight and touch of human sympathy. Such a habit of mind is narrowing and hardening, keeping one always on the defensive, and disqualifying him for that cheerful companionship and cordial intercourse which serves so greatly to lighten the trials and multiply the pleasures of life. Thrre are those who are ready to converse freely on common topics of general interest, but who carefully avoid all that may lead to a disclosure of their own private thoughts, feelings and experiences. Few subjects can be thus handled, except in the most superficial manner, and the result is unsatisfactory, an impression being generally left of want of candor and sincerity. Companionship grows dull and languid, and friendship is checked in the bud. He who never talks of himself, who never reveals his inner nature, who never suffers himself to think aloud, forfeits one of the sweetest joys of human life, that of sympathy and confidence.

SUN STROKES.

Three Cases Reported.

Another fatal case of sun stroke occurred on Tuesday, the victim being a man named William Copeland. He was employed at the lumber yard of Messrs. Lightner & Co., near the railway station at Wood's run, and had been at work all morning in the sun. About noon he was suddenly taken sick and carried into Glassburn's tavern near by, and Dr. Stewart summoned. Upon arriving the Doctor found the man frothing at the mouth and immediately pronounced it a case of sun stroke. Copeman was removed to the residence of his brother in the upper part of Allegheny, where he died on Tuesday evening, about eight o'clock. Coroner West held an inquest upon the remains and returned a verdict of death by sun stroke.

Yesterday afternoon a man named Glansey, who was at work at the outer depot in Allegheny, was over come by the heat, he was taken to his home, in the Sixth ward, where he now lies in a very critical condition.

A German who has only been in this country a few weeks, name not known, was at work on Troy Hill yesterday afternoon, when the intense heat overcame him, and he was taken to his home on Greene street. His recovery is thought to be very doubtful.

Climatic Changes.

With the mercury marking well up into the nineties, and the current of everyday life dawdling listlessly along through the heat and oppression, we are quite certain that it is summer at last, but a writer who makes a voluminous report of the weather during the last eight months may well put to us the question whether we are quite sure of any season of the year until we are far advanced into it. A comparison of the temperature during that time with the records of former years almost sustains the inference that our climate is changing and the seasons shifting about so as to utterly confuse our notions of expecting certain weather during certain months. The winters commence earlier and continue much longer; lengthening into spring they trench upon the heats of summer, while the latter in turn extend far into the fall, and we pass almost immediately from them into the snows and ice of winter again. The winter and summer have divided the days of spring and autumn between them, and nearly crowded those two pleasant seasons of the year out of existence. The fall of rain is gradually diminishing, the eternal springs are drying up, the days are growing colder in winter and hotter in summer, and everything connected with the thermal arrangements of the universe is going wrong. Perhaps some day the mysterious people who preside over the weather reports will tell us all about it, find out the reasons and point the remedies, but meanwhile we must endure the bother.
